RE: People v. Richard Adams, MVI24001514

I am supposedly listed as a "victim" in this criminal action against Richard Adams, with whom I have been with for many years and with whom I am raising children. We wouldn't actually know if I am listed as a victim, because no long-form complaint is yet on file in the Court.

From the limited information I know of this case, it stems from an allegation of domestic violence I made in February of this year. I had been drinking alcohol and Richard did not want me to drive. I wanted to leave so I called the police, and when they arrived, I was drunk, upset, and angry at Richard. I made comments that were untrue at the most and exaggerated at the least. I was unaware of any criminal proceedings until we received a letter in the mail about victim's rights (a letter I opened with Richard after returning from a weekend family vacation) earlier this month. This charge is doing more harm than good for our family now, and the future family we are planning together.

For criminal prosecution purposes, protective order purposes, or whatever the court has in mind, there has not been any abuse perpetrated against me by Richard Adams, contrary to whatever false information has sparked this prejudicial filing. I am not a domestic violence victim.

This ill-advised criminal filing negatively impacts the stability of our family, and it devastates Richard's peace officer employment and military advancement.

I do not want a protective order, I do not want this case to go further than a rapid dismissal, and I do want everyone to honor our need to protect our family unit, its growth, and our children. You are welcome to contact me.

Sincerely,
